ROBBERS A "JACK IN A BOX."

Springs Out When Henry Gibbs Opens Vault of Allen Company.

Concealing himself in the vault of the office of the W. D. Allen Manufacturing Company, 1005 Western avenue, Chicago, the other afternoon, a thief stole $700 after committing a murderous assault on Henry Gibbs, the superintendent. The robber struck Mr. Gibbs on the head with a revolver when he opened the door of the vault to get the money, which was part of the pay roll. Thrusting the superintendent into the vault and making him a prisoner by turning the combination knob, the bandit leaped toward the door. The way was blocked by Miss Barbara Walters, the company's stenographer, and Henry Gallagher, the bookkeeper. "If you raise a hand to stop me I'll kill you both," the thief said as he leveled the revolver. Springing over a railing, the robber, who was masked, reached the door forcing Miss Walters or Gallagher, could attract the attention of the large force of employees who were within hearing distance. He ran to Twenty-third street, where it is thought a horse and buggy were waiting for him. An examination was made of the vault and it was seen that the thief concealed himself there, lying out of the light on the top shelf. It was payday at the factory, and Supt. Gibbs, according to custom, put a satchel containing the pay roll in the vault between 1 and 2 o'clock. Three hundred dollars of the money was taken out to pay off the foundry men, leaving $700 in the satchel. At 5 o'clock Mr. Gibbs went to the vault to get the money, and as he swung open the big steel door he was confronted by the robber.
